

USDA-CSREES 2007 National Water Quality Conference

Adaptive Management for Water Resources Decision-making

Adaptive management is one of many models designed to assist decision-making that impacts natural resources. This presentation will briefly describe the process of adaptive management. It will also explore the benefits of and barriers to employing adaptive management in water resource decision-making, use examples to illustrate those benefits and barriers, and suggest some ways to broaden and strengthen the application of adaptive management in water resource management.

Author: Rebecca Power

University Affiliation: University of Wisconsin

Co-Author(s): N/A